

CCI NewsGate module information - CCI PageDirector

Laying out the page plan

In PageDirector, the user can:

- Access a number of predefined page plans that can be selected as the starting point for the current product.
- Drag and drop individual pages from predefined page plans to lay out the current product.
- Source pages and articles within and across publications meaning that entire pages or individual articles are automatically made available on the destination pages.
- Apply or edit a number of page planning metadata fields like color, desk designator, spread info, etc. Specific colors matching desk names can be configured.

Design pages and create assignments

- Design pages partially or entirely in PageDirector. The user has access to a list, including previews, of predefined page templates and article shapes.
- Choose to modify the outline of the article shapes.
- If applicable, mark articles for automatic assignments when the page plan is executed.

Placing content on pages

- Drag and drop texts, photos and graphics from a component list into article shapes on the page.
- Insert links to videos or embed videos in articles.
- If applicable, place ads manually on the page. Ads may also be premounted on the pages based on input from an ad stacking system.

Page control

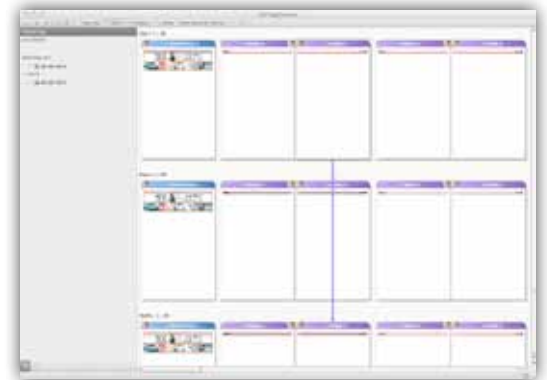

- Monitor page production and output finished pages. Pages may be produced partially or entirely in PageDirector, in CCI LayoutChamp or in Adobe InDesign.

Workflow made easy

When a user marks an article for assignment, the underlying structure enabling a collaborative workflow in NewsGate is automatically created when the page plan is executed. This means that an assignment link to the relevant user and an entry in the editorial budget are created, a Story Folder serving as the working environment for further work on the story is created, etc.

In PageDirector, users can create the current product by selecting pages from default page plans. Sourcing relations can be defined and visualized.
